Reflections of a first-time PTA member

In 2000, I informed my ex-boss that I was going to be a father. I candidly confessed that I was equally overjoyed and apprehensive. Apprehensive because I had no prior training or preparation for it. His reply was rather simple, "All first-time fathers have no prior experience or training. Jump into it and take it like a man....the second one will be better". In 2011, I was once again thrown into unfamiliar territory. With no ex-boss this time round, I turned to my wife and confessed that I was equally excited and worried. Worried because I had no prior training or experience. Her reply was equally simple, "Your children want you to be a PTA member so jump into it and take it like a man". Thus ending our discussion and signaled the beginning of an interesting journey as a first-time PTA member.

In reflection, the journey has enhanced my understanding of the school, the challenges faced by the teaching staff and the constant need of communication between the school and the parents.

The business of running the school efficiently and effectively is just as complex and stressful as any company in the world. However, the rewards defy all monetary returns. The growth and development of our children is the simplest yet most rewarding satisfaction. These were clearly evident during the recent primary 6 graduation lunch held at the Regal Hotel. It was indeed an emotional and meaningful event, not only for the students but also for the members of the teaching staff, the Vice Principal and the Principal. Farewell to the graduating students. May you remember the lessons and the love that has been bestowed upon you over the past 6 years by your beloved teachers.

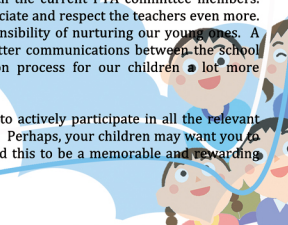

During the year, the school has had its fair share of challenges and tribulations. We are often reminded that God is there for us. The recent school bus debacle, which affected most schools in Hong Kong, exemplifies the challenges faced. The current school bus arrangement may not be the perfect solution. However, in light of the limited viable options available and the economical changes, it is certainly one that we can be most thankful. As a witness to the selection process, I salute the Principal and her team for their prayers and unwavering efforts. It is not only a testimony of their love and care for the children but also how God has been instrumental in holding our hands in finding the right solution.

It has been a rewarding & educational term for me personally. Rewarding, because it has been immensely pleasurable working with the current PTA committee members. Educational, because it has taught me to appreciate and respect the teachers even more. After all, they have been given the vital responsibility of nurturing our young ones. A task that cannot be defined as easy. With better communications between the school and the parents, we can make the education process for our children a lot more meaningful and effective.

Finally, I would like to encourage all parents to actively participate in all the relevant activities organized by the PTA and the school. Perhaps, your children may want you to be involved. In your reflections, may you find this to be a memorable and rewarding journey...just as I did.
